

A revival of Franklin gothic, carved from stone and steel. LOS ANGELES GOTHIC*

Los Angeles Gothic draws on the lineage of early 20th century American grotesques – the bold, utilitarian letterforms once found on newspapers, storefronts, and posters. While rooted in this tradition, it refines proportions and spacing for a contemporary voice, bridging historic craftsmanship with modern clarity.

Los Angeles Gothic comes from the same tough, no-nonsense family as Franklin Gothic – the kind of lettering that once sold papers on street corners and stood tall on factory signs. But this one's been to LA: a little sleeker, a little more polished, and ready for its close-up.
